MOTION TO DISMISS

The United States of America, by and through Donald Q. Cochran, United States Attorney for the Middle District of Tennessee, and Assistant United States Attorney Brent A. Hannafan, hereby moves to dismiss this case with prejudice against defendant Hatton.

This case has a long, involved history. In sum, the United States has been trying to have defendant extradited from two countries to appear in this District and face the charges in this case. The United States first sought to have defendant extradited from England. After defendant fought extradition for years, an English court finally ordered her to be extradited. However, the night before she was to be extradited, defendant fled to Ireland (her home country) instead of reporting to Heathrow Airport to meet with U.S. Marshals. The United States then sought to have her extradited from Ireland. After again fighting extradition for several years, and while imprisoned in an Irish prison during that time, an Irish court finally ordered that she was not to be extradited and ordered her released from the Irish prison.

Based upon the undersigned's conversations with DOJ attorneys who work on attempts to extradite defendants from Ireland, there is nothing else the United States can do to attempt to extradite defendant from Ireland. Counsel for defendant, James Price, has asked that the United States move to dismiss this case so that he may get paid for the work he has done on behalf of
